Eisenhower will send Congress a special message tomorrow detailing his proposals for a threeyear extension of the reciprocal trade act, with power to cut tariffs an additional 15 per cent.

This will be the first of a series of White House messages following up specific issues which the President sketched in broad outline in his State of the Union message

Cooper Sees Few Changes

While some critics of his world trade program said it fails to solve one of the most serious obstacles to an expanded exchange of free world goods, Rep. Jere Cooper (D-Tenn), chairman of the House 2 State Officials Ways and Means Committee, said he doubted there would be any tion proposals, which he is sponsoring in Congress.

Stevens Report On Peress Case

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9 (P) -Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis), who has renewed his demand for a new Senate investigation of the Peress case left Washington unexpectedly tonight for an undisclosed purpose.

McCarthy, who is still chairman of the Senate Investigations sub-committee, had called a closed meeting of the committee tomorrow to consider the Army's chronology of the Peress case.

This meeting, it was learned, has been postponed until at least Wednesday.

OAS To Hear Charge Hurled At Nicaragua

Council Will Meet In Special Session At 10:30 A.M. Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9 (A)-Costa Rica said today it is gravely threateed by "an army of adventurers training openly in Nicaragua" and will ask the Organization of American States to take action tomorrow to keep the peace, The OAS Council, composed of representatives of the 21 American republics, has called an extraordinary session at 10:30 a.m. EST to hear Costa Rica's charge of an invasion plot by Nicaragua.

Presidents Feuding

Presidents of the two countries have been feuding for more than a year. Anastasio Somoza, veteran president and strong man of Nicaragua, charged last April that an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate him was "plotted and directed in Costa Rica." ## Overseas Military Mail Goes To The Airlines

The Defense Department appears to have done a good stroke of business by giving scheduled commercial airlines the job of transporting military air mail overseas. A saving should result. If a reduction in subsidies paid the carriers should follow, so much

Robert B. Anderson, deputy secretary of defense, explains that the move is in line with the administration's policy of "minimum competition by the government with private enterprise." He added that it is expected to bring a great improvement in mail service to overseas Army and Navy post offices.

That is a reasonable expectation. The airlines are selling this service, along with others, and they are in competition with each other. They ought to do it better than military planes operated by organizations created for an entirely different purpose. They ought to be able to do it for less than the armed services, which need not worry about making a profit, can possibly do it.

As for the subsidies, Civil Aeronautics Board officials hope the change will lead to a reduction but are unable to estimate how much money might be involved. They have some figures on that situation.

During the 12 months ended last June 30 the government paid American international airlines $19,981,000 for carrying mail to foreign points. The lines also received subsidies totaling $35,083,000. In the year starting July 1 they will be paid $18,400,000 for carrying the overseas military mail.

It seems entirely likely that the lines, with their incomes swollen by $18,400,000, will be able to do with less subsidy money in the future. Their costs should not rise in proportion to the extra load. In some instances the additional mail will ride virtually mains that this Congress is sure free on unused capacity.

Military pilots who have been flying the mail will now go back to military flying. That is one more dividend from a good decision.

A Best Seller

For 114 weeks now, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's book, "The Power of Positive Thinking," has been at the top of the best seller list. That is a news item surely as significant as the Dr. Sam murder case, as Gloria Vanderbilt leaving Leopold Stokowski, or as the conflict between Arthur Godfrey and his staff.

For what this astonishing news item tells us is that among all the books published and sold to the general public through book stores, the one that has been most purchased each week for more than two years is a religious work, written by a clergyman whose object is to preach living according to the moral law of God. Dr. Peale is not a literary stylist; he does not use words for their effectiveness. He is a simple Ohioan, a Methodist who presides over a Dutch Reformed church, who, without much ado about it, captivates his reader as he does his listener, by the simplicity and humility of his conversation.

It is not Norman Vincent Peale who is very important in the phenomenon of his popularity. The same can be said for Billy Graham and Dr. James Fifield and hundreds of similar spiritual leaders. They serve a terrifying need, as Bishop Fulton Sheen does, the need for a comforting word, the need for a holding of hands, for a pat on the shoulder-the need to know that God does exist and that His servants labor upon this earth.

For 114 weeks, this little book "The Power of Positive Thinking," stands at the top of the best seller list because in these troubled times, in spite of what all the current wise ones say, men and women do turn to God and to a message that relates man to God. In our country, materalism does not satisfy. It is not enough. It is not comforting. Luxury does not make for peace of mind; a high standard of living does not make for contentment; money in the pocket or in the bank does not produce happy families. More and more of our people are beginning to recognize what Arnold Toynbee has said so correctly:

"Why is this secular cult of science not enough? Because science operates in a spiritual medium from which it can never detach itself. Our Western science is the child of moral virtues; and it must now become the father of further moral virtues if its extraordinary material triumphs in our times are not to bring human history to an abrupt, unpleasant, and discreditable end . . ."

Even Soviet Russia is discovering the frightful condition that too many Russians go to church and the atheistic campaign has been stepped up. The amazing fact is that science has not killed God, by whatever name He may be called. The pull toward the Divine Intelligence is so great these days that it is perceptible.

In this connection, I want to call attention to a remarkable book I have recently read which has not appeared on any best seller list. It is "A Democratic Manifesto," by Samuel Enoch Stumpf, professor of philosophy Vanderbilt University. This book deals with "The impact of dynamic Christianity upon public life and government."

To those who complain that there are thousands of books which tell of everything that is wrong about the United States and how everything is right elsewhere, particularly in the Soviet Universal State, here is a small book, easy to read, particularly good for intelligent young people, which has an answer and a message that is inspiring. Scholarly yet not pedantic, this book says:

"... Our heritage and tradition are rich in spiritual insight. And the case for democracy is a formidable one and ought to be stated in its fulness and with positive power. No one is under any illusion that simply by stating a set of ideas we can bring into tranquil repose a world torn by convulsive revolutionary forces. But it is equally unrealistic to deny that our present struggle is a fierce competition for men's minds and

Again, this significant book has been written by a profoundly religious thinker who relates the Judaic-Christian ethic to our immediate problems, most of which grow out of an abandonment of traditional morality-internationally, nationally and individually. I should not be surprised if I quote from Professor Stumpf's book in many of these

WASHINGTON-President Eisenhower's talks with intimates regarding his political future are continuing. The details of the talks are not always identical, but the general substance is. And one thing he keeps harping on is that he doesn't want to run for a second

Another thing he emphasizes is that the Republican party must build a new liberal organization, develop new leaders.

He also talks of policies very similar to those of Roosevelt and Truman-when it comes to foreign affairs - though, in at least one important case, Ike's ideas didn't get one inch beyond his more conservative, budget-balancing secretary of the treasury, George Humphrey.

Lunching with one liberal Republican the other day, the President emphasized the importance of getting vigorous, young Republicans to build the party from the grass roots up, talked about sending several thousand young Americans to work overseas in a mammoth crusade to win friendship.

Ike mentioned such men as Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey as the type of Republican needed to run for president. He indicated that he was not unhappy with the outcome of the November election because the two men he wanted most to win were Case and Rep. Jack Javitz, who became attorney general of New York; both liberal

There will be the same type of aid we have sent in the past, but no farsighted, longrange program such as Ike described to friends just before

Plans to rejuvenate the Republican party also run up against the roadblock of Senate conservatives. Today, the two senators proposed as chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee are McCarthyite Barry Goldwater of Arizona and McCarthyite Jenner of Indiana. Simultaneously Ike favors the

In contrast, Senator Martin of Pennsylvania, a member of the anti-Eisenhower, pro-Taft wing, gets most of the jobs but doesn't always vote with Ike.

Neuberger and Case of New Jersey were the feature speakers. Case gave an excellent speech, so good that Nuberger's might well have been an anticlimax. It wasn't. After some wisecracks and jokes on himself, he hit the theme: "We must base our politics on issues, not on character assassination."

This brought general applause, but Vice President Nixon, sitting one yard from the speaker's stand, did not applaud. He had gone into Oregon, together with eight Republican senators, and had personally delivered some of the worst character attacks on Neuberger.

'No election is worth winning," continued the young senator from Oregon, "if we have to abandon the Sermon on the Mount and the Ten Commandments.

By this time the vice president was getting red in the face.

"I hope," continued Neuberger, referring to Benedict Arnold, "that we will not begin accusing George Washington because he once trusted a traitor.

Nixon squirmed and got more crimson

'And I want to thank one man who came into Oregon and campaigned hard against me but campaigned squarely on the issues, not personalities," said the young senator. "I refer to the senior senator from California, Bill Knowland."

This brought down the house. Without mentioning Nixon's name, Neuberger had spanked him about as neatly and as soundly as anyone could be spanked.

For the objective of the Democrats is no longer to capture Conas well. For example, no one ex- gress-it is to capture the White House. The Democrats hope and believe that the political battles to come will show the Eisenhower administration and the Republican party in the worst possible light. Logically, this ought to hurt President Eisenhower and thus ease the Democrats' task of recapturing the White House. But even the most sanguine Democrats doubt that whatever happens in this session will hurt the President much, however much the Republican party may be hurt.

The problem of cutting President Eisenhower down to beatable size is, in fact, far and away the Democrats' most baffling problem. This reporter's nine year-old son, who received a junior sized printing press for Christmas, may have indicated one reason why the problem is so baffling. He recently produced the first issue of a newspaper with which he hopes to recoup the family fortune. It consisted of a single headline: "President Ike When you live next door to a boy Is Good.

While lacking of certain journalistic objectivity, this headline may be a good deal more significant than much that has appeared in this space. For as long as nine year-old boys-and large numbers of voters-have this opinion of the President, the problem confronting the Democrats will continue to be baffling. It will be baffling no matter how regularly the Republican party attempts to commit suicide.

Luxury does not make for peace of mind; a high standard of living does not make for contentment; money in the pocket or in the bank does not produce happy families. More and more of our people are beginning to recognize what Arnold Toynbee has said so correctly:

"Why is this secular cult of science not enough? Because science operates in a spiritual medium from which it can never detach itself. Our Western science is the child of moral virtues; and it must now become the father of further moral virtues if its extraordinary material triumphs in our times are not to bring human history to an abrupt, unpleasant, and discreditable end . . .'

Even Soviet Russia is discovering the frightful condition that too many Russians go to church and the atheistic campaign has been stepped up. The amazing fact is that science has not killed God, by whatever name He may be called. The pull toward the Divine Intelligence is so great these days that it is perceptible.

In this connection, I want to call attention to a remarkable book I have recently read which has not appeared on any best seller list. It is "A Democratic Manifesto," by Samuel Enoch Stumpf, professor of philosophy, Vanderbilt University. This book deals with "The impact of dynamic Christianity upon public life and government." To those who complain that there are thousands of books which tell of everything that is wrong about the United States and how everything is right elsewhere, particularly in the Soviet Universal State, here is a small book, easy to read, particularly good for intelligent young people, which has an answer and a message that is inspiring. Scholarly yet not pedantic, this book says:

". . . Our heritage and tradition are rich in spiritual insight. And the case for democracy is a formidable one and ought to be stated in its fulness and with positive power. No one is under any illusion that simply by stating a set of ideas we can bring into tranquil repose a world torn by convulsive revolutionary forces. But it is equally unrealistic to deny that our present struggle is a fierce competition for men's minds and

Again, this significant book has been written by a profoundly religious thinker who relates the Judaic-Christian ethic to our immediate problems, most of which grow out of an abandonment of traditional morality-internationally, nationally and individually. I should not be surprised if I quote from Professor Stumpf's book in many of these

Eisenhower Wants To Build Up Party With Vigorous, Young Republicans

WASHINGTON-President Eisenhower's talks with intimates regarding his political future are continuing. The details of the talks are not always identical, but the general substance is. And one thing he keeps harping on is that he doesn't want to run for a second

Another thing he emphasizes is that the Republican party must build a new liberal organization, develop new leaders.

He also talks of policies very similar to those of Roosevelt and Truman-when it comes to foreign affairs - though, in at least one important case, Ike's ideas didn't get one inch beyond his more conservative, budget-balancing secretary of the treasury, George Humphrey.

Lunching with one liberal Republican the other day, the President emphasized the importance of getting vigorous, young Republicans to build the party from the grass roots up, talked about sending several thousand young Americans to work overseas in a mammoth crusade to win friendship.

Ike mentioned such men as Sen. Clifford Case of New Jersey as the type of Republican needed to run for president. He indicated that he was not unhappy with the outcome of the November election because the two men he wanted most to win were Case and Rep. Jack Javitz, who became attorney general of New York; both liberal Republicans.

old guard Democrats. Roosevelt had to sidestep the Jim Farleys. the Ed Flynns, and the other pros by organizing independent political committees such as that under Fiorello La Guardia. Likewise, Eisenhower has side-stepped the regular Republican National Committee by reinvigorating the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee. He confided to one close friend that he was even thinking of making James Murphy, head of the Citizens Committee, the new chairman of the GOP National Committee. Ike's friends also recall that he started out with a GOP chairman supposed to be a liberal Republican Wesley Roberts of Kansas-but had to drop him after Roberts' unforeseen lobbying record was revealed. In a hurry and not knowing where to turn, he took Leonard Hall as the new chairman, but hasn't been too happy with him.

The President's friends say he really waxes eloquent when describing his ideas for building friendship abroad and putting across more liberal domestic policies at home. The trouble is that he runs up against constant roadblocks from his own supporters.

For instance, Harold Stassen and John Foster Dulles had worked out a new Marshall Plan for Southeast Asia with the full blessing of the President. But when Stassen announced it at a press conference, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey telephoned him from Brazil and proceeded to bawl him out in the harshest sort of language.

The minute he returned from Brazil, Humphrey effectively blocked the proposed Marshall Plan for Southeast Asia. As a result, there just isn't going to be any Marshall Plan. There will be the same type of aid we have sent in the past, but no farsighted, longrange program such as Ike described to friends just before Christmas.

Of course, it would be unfair to my readers for me to advise them what to do. Most of these "worthless" certificates in your attic or desk drawers are of old mining companies. They may never have been any good, or are of mines which have completely "petered out." The company did not have the money to dissolve legally, but some rancher has paid the taxes for the privilege of using the land for pasture. Hence, the company was forgotten after the stockholders were told it was no good.

The land is still useless for getting gold or silver, copper or lead; but uranium may have been found! As a result, the land could increase in value in one week from $5 per acre to $50,000 per acre! Some oldtimer who remembers the old company has found a list of the old stockholders and has written them a letter offering $10 a share. marks you "dead." One of the companies in which my family has very large holdings (United Stores Common, selling on the American Stock Exchange for $3 to $4) has nearly 100 such stockholders who cannot be located. Perhaps you are one of these stockholders. There probably are hundreds of other companies just like United Stores. This stock could easily double or treble in value.

Never Sell Defaulted Bonds

When a stock stops paying dividends the price of the stock may gradually decline, but no one gets panicky. The stockholders hope for a resumption of dividends. When, however, a bond defaults-especially a foreign bond-most bondholders think this is the end. The price of the bond then suddenly drops from around par to 50 cents on the dollar. Discouraged bondholders have rushed to sell their bonds and the price has dropped to 20 or even less. But, in the course of years, many of these bonds returned in value to $1,000.

Some of the hotels in the famous Sheraton chain were built in the gay 90s. The bonds were sold for $1,000 each. Then they defaulted and kicked about at perhaps $200 for years. Finally, one of Boston's most courageous financiers, Ernest Henderson, had faith in the hotel business and bought up these bonds. They have since been paid off at par.
